FIRST AID FOR INFLUENZA

Would you keep her in bed?

A RECENT check of cold remedies in the United States reveals that quite a large percentage of them have quinine as one, or often the chief, ingredient. This has caused not a little horror among the younger generation of doctors, but nothing like so much among the more seasoned practitioners.

In Europe quinine had long been regarded as a probable remedy for colds and the much more serious influenza. But even in Europe there is dispute as to just what quinine does to us. In other words the mechanism of its efficacy is open to professional argument.

This scepticism is even more rife here, especially among the professionals and experts. One of the leading research men in America answered a question of what he did when he caught a cold by saying, "I stay home in bed." Which was merely a way of saying that he believed no drug was of any value for a cold.

But we are a realistic lot and we read, and so it trickles down even to John Doe that the Europeans have used quinine for colds and influenza—and why not take a chance.

It is precisely the taking of this chance and finding that it works that has led to the manufacture and sale of innumerable cold remedies in the U. S., many of which contain quinine.

What impresses us is that in spite of criticism of "quackery" by some of the experts, these manufacturers have provided the public with many quinine mixtures sold as remedies for colds and influenza. If these were failures they could not possibly have had the success that has come to some of them. Our public cares nothing about splitting professional hairs,—it simply wants an effective cure.

And so the controversy rages between the experts and the people. The latter may not always know that for years European doctors have preached that at the rate of five grains a day, quinine will keep most of us from colds. But we know very well that here, in spite of the experts, quinine has been used for colds and influenza for over fifty years.

Burma Road Hums As Far East War Spreads

RANGOON, Burma.—Every day and every night, the whir of 3,000 loaded trucks hums and re-echoes over the rocky gorges and deep ravines which surround the vital road bringing supplies from the den ories of the West to the heart of blockaded China. Topping mountain ranges and slithering through malarial valleys, narrows to 9 feet in some places and widening to 16 in others, what was once a caravan route for Chinese silk merchants has now become a 1,500-mile highway connecting China with her Allies.

When Japanese invaders seized the China coast in 1937 the Burma Road was only a mule trail for mule trains carrying produce from and to China, anticipating From the outside world already allocated $2,000,000 construction of a m from Lashio, terminus of the Burma railroad, to Kunming, China. Every county along the proposed highway was assigned its stretch of the road. From villages and towns bordering the old silk route poured almost 1,000,000 workers, men, women and children, bringing food, pickaxes, make-shift shelters. Many of the workers died from malaria; often monsoons washed away sections of the new road; but the work persisted. In two years, 800 miles of road crossing nine 5,000-foot ridges were completed. By 1939 American-made trucks were carrying Red Cross supplies and munitions 1,500 miles from Lashio to Chunking, China's war capital.

Today, with Japanese forces spreading fan-wise over the entire southwest Pacific area, this vital link to China from British Burma is a key in Allied military strategy. With a monthly capacity of 40,000 tons, the Burma highway has seen an increase in the transport of military supplies from 3,301 tons to 17,509 tons in four months, and has survived and increased raids by Japanese bombers. Dickerson Is First County Boy Killed In The War

Ready For February 16 Sign-up

Only nine simple questions will be asked these men who register on February 16 for possible military service under the Selective Service Act, Colonel Mills F. Neal, State Director of Selective Service for Virginia emphasized today.

Registration of the individual should require a comparatively short time, the Director said, pointing out that the registrant will not be asked to fill out questionnaires but must only answer interrogations about his identity, his place of residence, and his mailing address. Also he will be required to list his telephone, if any; his age in years and date of birth, the name and address of the person who will always know his address, his employer's name and address, and his place of employment or business.

While it is important that registration be conducted as speedily as possible, Colonel Neal said that every registrant will be given ample time to respond properly to the questions on the registration card, which on this occasion will be green. White and melon cards, respectively, were used for the first and second Selective Service registrations.

No questionnaires will be given registrants when they register February 16, nor will they be required to undergo any physical examination on that date.

Questionnaires are given to registrants after their order numbers have been determined and reached by their local boards. Physical examinations are given only after the boards have passed on the general qualification of registrants and have determined that they should not be deferred for reasons of interest to the nation.

When registered, each registrant must answer the following nine questions:

(1) Name of Registrant;

(2) Place of Residence;

(3) Mailing Address (if other than Place of Residence);

(4) Telephone;

(5) Age in Years and Date of Birth;

(6) Place of Birth;

(7) Name and Address of Person who will always know your Address;

(8) Employer's Name and Address, and

(9) Place of Employment or business.

After a registrant has answered all questions and signed his name to the registration card, he will be given a registration certificate signed by the registrar. This certificate must be in the personal possession of the registrant at all times, Colonel Neal warned. Failure to possess the certificate or to show it to authorized persons, constitutes a violation of Selective Service regulations and is considered prima facie evidence of failure to register.

Proposed Sugar Rationing

Here are some angles of the proposed rationing of sugar, covered in questions and answers:

Q. Who will have to get sugar rationing books?

A. Every individual who wants to buy sugar from a retail store.

Q. How will one go about getting a war ration book?

A. By registering with teachers in public schools on a date to be announced later, and obtain the book at that time.

Q. What will the book contain?

A. 28 stamps, each good for a designated amount of sugar which may be purchased during a single, specific week.

Q. Will one be able to save the stamps and use them next week?

A. No. The stamps will be good only for the week they are designated.

Q. What happens when one goes to the grocer?

A. You will tear out the stamp for that particular week and give it to the grocer.

Q. Will each individual have a book, or will there be one for each family?

A. There will be one book for each person, regardless of age.

Q. What happens when one registers?

A. You go to your neighborhood schoolhouse where you will report the amount of sugar you have on hand. If you have on hand more than two pounds for each person in your family, stamps covering that surplus will be torn out of the war ration book before you receive it.

Q. What happens if I don't report my sugar surplus?

A. False reports subject you to maximum penalties of a $10,000 fine or 10 years in prison, or both.

Q. How much sugar will one be able to buy?

A. The Office of Price Administration has not yet decided, but it probably will be 12 ounces a week for each person.

Q. When will sugar rationing start?

A. The OPA says it will be in "several weeks" when the tremendous job of printing rationing books has been completed.

Q. If one eats regularly at hotels, restaurants, cafeterias, and lunchrooms, does one need a war ration book?

A. Probably not, but definite plans are being worked out by OPA for institutionalized eating places.

Q. If one lives with a family as a boarder or roomer, is one included in the family's quota?

A. No. You apply individually for your ration book.

Q. Can a housewife take the rest of the family's ration books to the grocery for the week's supply?

A. Yes. She may obtain the family's entire weekly supply at one time.

Q. Will there be enough sugar on hand for all requests?

A. The OPA and the War Production Board are making every effort to see that adequate supplies will be on hand to meet all rationing demands.

Q. Why is sugar rationing necessary?

A. OPA Administrator Leon Henderson said rationing is necessary because:

(1) Sugar cane is needed for molasses to manufacture smokeless powder.

(2) Stoppage of sugar imports from the Philippines and curtailment of shipments from Hawaii, and,

(3) Shipment to others of the United Nations which have been cut off from their regular service.

(Editor's note: answers to above questions subject to final regulations. At time ration books are issued.)

Report to The Nation....

The war production story of the past eighteen months and what the United States must do to achieve its potential overwhelming arms superiority is detailed in a Report To The Nation just issued by Archibald MacLeish, Director of the Office of Facts and Figures. The report was prepared at the request of President Roosevelt.

Only "by the mobilization of every available man, woman, dollar and thing....every plant, tool, machine and bit of material" can an adequate production structure be built, says the report.

Among the high-lights of war production in the United States since the fall of France are:

The foundation has been laid for an armament program of a magnitude no other nation has ever attempted.

Nearly three times as many weapons and supplies of war will be produced this year as in the eighteen months between June, 1940, and the end of 1941.

This year our production of planes and tanks will equal that of Hitler in all the years before 1939 when he was preparing to conquer the world.

War spending has soared from an annual rate of two billion dollars on July 1, 1940, to a rate of almost 20 billion dollars on December 1, 1941. It must reach a rate of 48 billions this year and more than 70 billions next.

Goods from the arsenal of democracy are flowing or will flow to all corners of the earth where the soldiers and sailors of democracy fight the Axis.

The United States production program, as described in the Report to the Nation, covers every phase of the war: The Army and the Navy, planes, tanks, ordnance, munitions, shipments throughout the world under the Lend-Lease Act, construction and expansion of new plants and conversion of existing plants. The report tells the story of ship construction and repair. It describes the degree to which more workmen are needed in war industries and the plans for recruiting and training them. The part played by science in the war against the Axis is also described.

The report constantly stresses the fact that a start, only, has been made. For military reasons it cannot reveal the exact number of planes, tanks or ships being built, but the rate of building is impressive. Production of tanks and other combat vehicles is now more than three times as large as a year ago; output of all types nearly five times as large. Army warplane production, the report states, "has been stepped up to the point where, with Great Britain, we soon shall exceed the plane output of the Axis countries. More important, we shall have the plant capacity to increase our production to the point where we can seize control of the air in all areas of the world struggle." Not only this, the report continues, but the Army now has "four types of combat planes ....better than anything yet produced abroad." In short, the Army's story is one of equipment of all kinds as well as housing for an ultimate army of 7,000,000 men, the largest in the history of the nation.

Progress Toward 2-Ocean Navy

The Navy, fighting the aggressor in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, is rapidly becoming a two-ocean fighting force instead of the traditional one-ocean combat unit. Fifteen battleships are being built, 11 aircraft carriers, 54 cruisers, 193 destroyers, and 73 submarines. The Navy has 2,000 new airplanes and work is being pushed day and night on its new bases, air stations, docks and other facilities. Merchant shipping, equally vital in the war against Germany, Japan and Italy, will soon be augmented at a rate of two ships a day, the building of ships in World War II dwarfs the program of World War I. When the program is in full swing, an army of 750,000 men will be building ships in the United States. Already contracts have been signed for 999 ships. Added to this building program is the task of getting men to operate the new merchant fleet. Crews must be found for about 80 ships, so 25,000 seamen and 6,300 officers are to be trained for this service.
